

We'll Come To Your Classroom During
Brain Awareness Month
March 2008

It is almost time for Brain Awareness Month in Georgia, and the Atlanta Chapter of the Society for Neuroscience and the Center for Behavioral Neuroscience are teaming with area scientists to visit metro Atlanta classrooms and share the importance of the brain and brain health with students and teachers.

Classroom Visits May Include:

Learning neuroanatomy and touching a real brain

Playing a multi-media BRAIN GAME

Acting out brain/muscle interactions needed to move your arm or leg

Information about neuroscience careers

And much more!

Lending Library of Learning Resources

The Center for Behavioral Neuroscience has a collection of human and animal brain models available for use in K-12 classrooms. Educators can 'check out' any of these materials as one would check out a library book. For more information visit: www.cbn-atl.org/education/library.shtml.

To Schedule A Classroom Visit:

Log on to <http://www.atlantabrain.org> and fill out an online form.

For further questions, contact Kim Maguschak (kmagusc@emory.edu) or Michael Black (seawater@gsu.edu).